

Portfolio.

Eleonore GUERRA

2025

01.

Commercial illustrations

“Proud to Be” illustrations

In partnership with Lloyds Banking Group, we celebrated Black History Month 2021 through a series of engaging internal events. The Commercial Banking teams hosted a ProudToBe chat show featuring an inspiring lineup of speakers :

Mista Strange, Michelle Funky Celebrant, Destynee Onwochei, and Hermon & Heroda.

Throughout the discussions, my illustrations were showcased, visually capturing the essence and impact of the conversations.

Book illustrations

CHLOE'S STORY

"How do you get a coffee if you're moving in a wheelchair?" This isn't a question Stef Parker would have ever dreamed of asking herself before she was diagnosed with fibromyalgia and ME. Stef, a project manager in Major Core Programmes, was transformed from an energetic person, who was constantly on the go, to someone who was bedridden. She was forced to take three long months off work to recuperate.

Once back at work, Stef struggled to adjust to her 'new normal'. She felt out of place, isolated, and worst of all, she questioned her value. Then she came across the Access site on HIVE and learned there was a support network for people with disabilities and long-term health conditions like her. She decided to write a post on the forum about what she was going through.

Finally, Stef had a place to share her story. But she wasn't prepared for what came next. "I can't believe just how many people responded and made me feel I wasn't alone and wasn't broken," she recalls.

Things began to change for the better. She attended Access' Personal Development Programme, which helped her understand how much of an asset she was at work. Her future career became just as bright as it had been before she'd gotten sick.

This realisation led Stef to become an Access Rep, now known as an Accessibility Advocate. She wanted to be, "the person to hold someone's hand as they went through the same journey".

One way she advocates for Access is by spreading awareness about a range of conditions like visual and mobility impairments. She even brings her own wheelchair to events so people can experience sitting in it themselves. Stef concludes with praise for Access: "I'm not exaggerating when I say it's been genuinely life-changing for me... and hopefully it will be for you."

STEF'S STORY

Chloe Allen was accustomed to shaping her life around limitations and 'must not do's'. When she was just 11, she received a diagnosis that would change the course of her life. Chloe was told she was epileptic. This label began to control all the things she could – and couldn't – do. "I was merely existing," Chloe says, recalling how epilepsy and anxiety ruled her life. Until she discovered Access – the group disability network, which provides guidance, support and relevant information to colleagues. It also hosts events and workshops. Chloe participated in the Personal Development Course through Access and found it both enlightening and empowering. It gave her the opportunity to talk to others about her experiences, which led to a strong network of supportive colleagues. "I learned more about my condition in my first year with Access than I had since I was diagnosed."

Chloe once believed sports could damage her health. After joining Access, she realised this advice was outdated. She started running. Within 12 months she became a jog leader. Chloe has smashed through old restrictions, and is now enjoying her life to the full. Keen to help others achieve their goals, she decided to volunteer for the network, helping colleagues with disability related queries and support, as well as promoting the network more widely. Chloe enjoys giving something back to her colleagues, and champions change at every level of the organisation, helping to make a difference through education and better understanding. In December 2020 she won the Access and Me award, which celebrates what the network means to colleagues – through their stories, poetry and videos.

"I try to be a positive role model for colleagues and encourage them to believe you can achieve anything you set your mind on," Chloe concludes.

Children's book illustrations

Book written by Christiane Bolle - Reddat

Podcast illustration

Some of our colleagues at Lloyds Banking Group shared their stories, and we created a podcast about it on their Interchange platform.

Card game illustrations

Alan Turing Institute illustrations

Lloyds Bank flyers

These illustrations captures the powerful message of advocating for a healthier, more inclusive workplace by encouraging colleagues to “Speak Up !” against toxic behaviours. In a world where silence often enables harm, this piece visually embodies the courage it takes to confront injustices, communicate openly, and foster a culture of accountability.

3D Blender modelling

Let's work together

eleonore.t.guerra@gmail.com

www.eleonoreguerra.com

+44 7877 044 603

